MEMORIAL DAY FITTINGLY OBSERVED

Ideal weather labored in conjunction with the Woman's Relief Corps and W. H. Stone Post American Legion to work out the most extensive arrangements ever attempted in Norway for a fitting observance of Memorial Day.

Promptly at 9 o'clock, the committees including Carrie Tucker and Mrs. Jennie Richardson for the Corps and Abe Klain and Philip Young for the Legion had the parade in line opposite Stone's Drug Store. This was the longest line assembled on a Memorial Day in years, the Loyal Order of Moose degree team appearing in full regalia.

Major Bial F. Bradbury, commander of William Henry Stone Post, American Legion, acted as marshal of the day and was assisted by Abe Klain. The Norway-Paris band led by Allie Cote, was at the head of the procession. A large delegation from the American Legion and Sons of Veterans acted as escort for the Civil War veterans who rode in automobiles.

Following them came 60 members of the Relief Corps, Daughters of the American Revolution and Daughters of Veterans, in autos. The Boy Scouts turned out and the school children, dressed in white carrying flags, made a pretty sight. 24 young girls carried the big flag outstretched; these were followed by the fraternal organizations of Masons, Loyal Order of Moose, Rebekahs, Knights of Pythias, I. O. O. F., Women of Mooseheart Legion and others. The line of march was to the Pine Grove Cemetery where a short program was given with music by the band, and singing by the school children directed by Mrs. Walter L. Stone. Rev. M. O. Baltzer offered prayer, followed by selection by the children. Donald B. Partridge of Norway gave a short inspiring address. A selection by the band concluded the program.

The members of Harry Rust Post then proceeded to decorate the graves of their comrades using more than 150 wreaths made by the members of the Relief Corps and D. of V.'s.

After the ceremony of decoration the line was reformed and they proceeded to Rustfield Cemetery where the band played a dirge and the members of the Legion decorated the graves for the veterans. The procession then marched to the starting point and disbanded.

A dinner was furnished at noon in the Grange Hall by the three women's patriotic organizations. Over 200 covers were laid for the G. A. R., American Legion, Sons of Veterans, Spanish War Veterans, the local clergymen and families and the school children. The committee from the corps consisted of Mrs. Alta Sheen, Mrs. Annie Beck, Mrs. Eva Fogg, Mrs. Grace Whitman and Mrs. Lizzie Richardson from the Daughters of Veterans. Mrs. Eunice Marston, Mrs. Cora Abbott, Nina Butters, Grace Gammon, Mrs. Vesta Smith, from the D. A. R.'s. Mrs. Lucelia Merriam, Mrs. Hattie Brown, Mrs. Gertrude Libby. Other members of these organizations assisted in serving.

At three o'clock services were held at the Opera House. The following program was given: Commander, Winfield S. Cordwell presiding; processional by the band, to which the G. A. R. Post marched to the seats reserved for them, David A. Jordan acting as marshal. They were followed by the W. R. C., D. of V.'s and D. A. R. singing "Star Spangled Banner" by the audience; selection by the band; prayer, Rev. M. O. Baltzer; selection by band.

The address of the day was given by Donald B. Partridge of Norway, Clerk of Courts for Oxford County. He held the closest attention with an earnest appeal for Americanism at its best. His address was as follows:

"Commander Cordwell, Members of the Grand Army and Relief Corps, Daughters of Veterans, Sons of Veterans, Veterans of the Spanish American War, Veterans of the World War, and Ladies and Gentlemen:

"I would not do justice to myself nor to you did I not express my sincere thanks and appreciation for your greeting and for the honor you have conferred upon me in inviting me to address you upon this splendid occasion.

Since the close of the civil war it has been our custom and our privilege each year upon this day set aside upon the calendar to gather about the heroes of '61 and pledge anew our abiding faith in the triumphant justice of their cause, while with tender and sacred memory we have placed the stars and stripes above the graves of those noble patriots of that period, who have answered the bugle call of the Great Grand Army above, but as the years have rolled by perils have confronted our republic calling other men to its defense, who have gone forth with the same patriotism and sacrifice as the men of the period of the rebellion, and so today we add to the army of '61 the armies of '98 and 1917 and pay honor to them with the same degree of devotion and love.

Truly it is a most significant day. A day for reverent and sacred memory and deep reflection, of renewed consecration to the highest ideals and purposes of life and for renewal of our obligations to this republic. It is, therefore, well that we pause in the hurried rush of our lives to enjoy the glow and pure light which shines from the noble characters of the men who have saved this republic to liberty and humanity. Time marches by so swiftly and our minds are so taken up with daily routine of life that we need to learn more of the value and worth of these heroes who have made our country what it is, and to emulate their deeds. And, my friends, not only should we recall the soldier's services and do them honor, but especially should we study their exalted characters, that matchless patriotism, that noble spirit, which prompted them to decline ease and station for themselves preferring that greater glory and benefit should come to their fellowmen, and from these wonderful characteristics draw lessons and inspiration for ourselves and confidence in the future of this republic, which we in turn may impart to others.

It is not my purpose this afternoon to make any attempt at oratory for I would fail, neither shall I try to tickle your ears with entertainment, for this is a day for serious thought and meditation, and my only hope and desire is that as I review the splendid achievements of these heroes and draw from those achievements some lessons for us to consider, I may utter one word or express one thought that will stir one person to better Americanism, thereby bringing them to a better realization of their opportunities and responsibilities as citizens, I shall indeed be happy.

First upon this occasion our thoughts should turn reverently and with admiration to those boys of '61, heroes of the civil war, members of the grandest army that ever assembled on American soil. You will forgive my reference to you as boys, for I like to forget so far as I can the white hairs and bent forms, and think of you in those days when you went out from your homes in the strength of youth and vigor to save this republic. In your eyes this afternoon I do not see age, but rather I see strength of patriotism, love of country and a determination to preserve Americanism, and beneath your years I see souls of youth and principles which you have interwoven into our Americanism that will live and be perpetuated long after you have answered the last roll call.

Today the name of the Grand Army of the Republic thrills the heart of every American and each year as the ranks grow thinner the name of the Grand Army of the Republic grows dearer and sweeter to us all.

Yours was a glorious mission well accomplished without selfishness, without thought of honor or position, but with the only thought of preservation of the Union, you went out from your homes, in those dark days of despair and discouragement, through years of suffering and privation, you fought on, won the victory, preserved the Union, and laid the foundation of the greatest country in the world and the hope of civilization. Happy is this country with such a lesson, fortunate the people who have received the legacy of such an example.

Sometimes, I think that upon this day we are inclined to think and dwell too much upon the leaders of the civil war, such as Lincoln, Grant and Sherman, and while to an extent it is perfectly proper that we should so do, let us not forget that the humblest soldier who carried a musket is entitled to as much credit for the results of the civil war as were those who were in command. They were willing to give their all in the cause of liberty and humanity, and so long as the young men of this country are animated by the same spirit which these men possessed there will be no fear for the future of this republic. It is from these men that we should take our lesson for today and tomorrow.

I can imagine the impatience and anxiety of you men of '61 to get into the conflict which has just closed. How day after day with feverish heat you watched the battle line as it moved forward or backward as the case might be, with never a doubt as to the final result. Although it was not your privilege to see action in that conflict you had an important part in winning it, for your sacrifices and the spirit and example which you manifested in the days of '61 inspired these boys on to glorious victory. They had traditions to live up to and maintain, which you had established. Moreover, had it not been for your noble work this country never would have been in a position to have saved civilization. For thank God, that by your achievements, this country was able to enter the world conflict without division, there was no north or south, no east or west, but a united country bent on the one purpose of crushing autocracy, and by the Heavens we did it!

Only a few years ago a confederate soldier addressing a memorial day audience in the north uttered these words:

"I am a Southerner. I loved the South and dared for her to fight from Look-out to the sea
With her proud banner over me.
I stand and say that you were right

Rumford High 8; Norway High 3

Norway High was defeated in an open date game at Rumford, Monday. Costly errors and scattered hits were the causes keeping Norway below the winners in score making. The game went close until Rumford opened strong in the fourth inning with six runs. Norway did some freak work during this period and failed to make good the damage before the end. Aside from the bad inning the game was hotly contested and proved exciting for the fans. The score:

Bassett's Garage Fire

Fire destroyed the large building just off Main street in the rear of Albert P. Bassett's early Wednesday morning. The structure was owned by Mr. Bassett and used as a repository for automobiles. Five cars were destroyed besides a large stock of tires and accessories belonging to the owner of the building. Persons losing cars were:—Guy McAllister, Carlton Barker, Leo Swett, Albert P. Bassett, and Charles F. Canwell. All were Fords without insurance except Mr Canwell's Overland, which is protected from fire loss. Harrington Flint rushed into the smoke and flames and was able to drive his automobile out. A self starter made it possible to do the trick safely.

Vera Smith, aged 16, who lives within a few rods of the building, was awaken about 2.45, a. m., by the brilliant light, and is reported to be the first to discover the fire. She awakened the family, and an alarm was given on the street by her father. The signals failed to respond from the boxes and the whistles sent out a general alarm.

The fire had gained great headway before discovery, and when the department arrived the building was a roaring furnace. Oil and gasoline from leaking tanks added fuel to the flames, and tires exploded with a loud report. Adjoining buildings were threatened and the hose companies were stationed at various points to protect exposed localities

Mr. Bassett saved some stock from an office attached to the structure, otherwise his soock and the buildings are a total loss.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Car owners looking over the wreck, Wednesday, have some consolation in finding the engines in fair condition and a possibility of getting the machines on the road at reasonable cost. They will be convered into the racing models if plans are carried out.

Drawing and Music Exhibition

The annual exhibition of music and drawing of the grade schools held at Norway Opera House, Friday afternoon was largely attended and proved interesting. This entertainment was to procure money for new Victrola records and a foundation fund for a piano in the grades.

The recital and exhibition was arranged by Mrs. Walter L. Stone, teacher of music and drawing in the Norway schools the grade teachers assisting. Fine work has been accomplished the past year as shown in the drawings and musical program given.

Indian songs and war dance by the primary boys in full costume was the real thing and executed true to type. They added lot of pep and carried out the idea in regulation style.

Some forty primary girls, dressed in white and carrying dolls, kept perfect time as they rocked and fondled their infants while singing "Dolly's Lullaby."

Grades 3 and 4 gave two Swedish Folk Dances in a pleasing manner. The Lassies' Dance" and "Shoemakers' Dance" by the three primaries were well done. Songs by grades 5, 6, 7 and 8 were nicely rendered. The schools at Norway Lake and Crockett Ridge offered a song number. The "Sailors' Hornpipe" by grade 6 and "Minuet" by grade 5 were well received. All parts were well taken and the program moved smoothly.

A large collection of drawings was on exhibition around the hall. The subjects included pencil and color work from plain geometrical line sketching from the primary department, to real artistic productions made in the higher grades.

Memorial Day Exercises

The exercises Monday forenoon were in charge of Wm. K. Kimball Post, G. A. R., and were in much the same form as usual. Headed by a drum corps, including Howard Shaw, George Soper, Frank Kimball, and Ray Newton, the procession started from Grand Army Hall at 10 o'clock. About thirty members of the American Legion, with Capt. Guy Cole as color bearer, acted as escort. Fourteen or fifteen members of Wm. K. Kimball Post were in the procession, and while a few of them rode, most of them marched. The flag was carried as in the past by Isaac Monk, who has been color bearer for many years, though this time he was assisted by his son, A. G. Monk. The Ladies of the G. A. R. and the Sons of Veterans were well represented, and there were several hundred school children in line carrying flags.

At Riverside Cemetery prayer was offered by Rev. D. F. Faulkner, a selection was sung by the Æolian Quartette, and Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Rev. C. W. Rogers, followed by the decoration of the soldiers' graves. The procession returned by the way of Moore Park, where the soldiers' monument was decorated.

W. S. Starbird presided at the afternoon exercises which were held in Grange Hall. Several patriotic selections were rendered by Shaw's Orchestra of seven pieces. Prayer was offered by Rev. C. W. Rogers, and a selection was sung by the Æolian Quartette, with Mrs. Agnes Morton at the piano.

Mr. Starbird in his opening remarks gave the names of four comrades of Wm. K. Kimball Post who have died during the year. He especially welcomed the members of the American Legion to take up the work of the day which the old veterans are about to lay down.

Lieut. Earle Clifford called upon by the chairman, spoke briefly regarding the American Legion and its intents and purposes and recited "Flander's Field."

Gen. Logan's order for the observance of the first Memorial Day, in 1868, was read by Rev. D. F. Faulkner.

Rev. J. L. Wilson of the South Paris Baptist Church gave the address of the day, which was appropriate and inspiring.

Fire At Mason Manufacturing Co.

A disastrous fire swept clean the south end of the lumber yard of the Mason Manufacturing Co., Monday afternoon, causing a heavy loss. The flames spread rapidly in the pine and hardwood lumber piles stacked for seasoning, and with a stiff wind blowing toward the factory, the situation became alarming. Not only was the Mason property in immediate danger, but a large residential section on Pine street leading directly into the Market Square lay in the path of the flames.

A scant water supply and low pressure hampered the fire department. The factory fire pump went into action and the Norway department was summoned. Water was turned on into the Pine street main from the Norway system and in a short time several lines of hose were playing under full head on the roaring flames.

Aid was telephoned to the Lewiston Fire Department, but Chief Moriarity was unable to secure a car at the Maine Central or Grand Trunk suitable to transport the apparatus. Portland was called, but as the fire had been kept from advancing and a favorable shift in the wind assisted to bring it under control, the order was cancelled.

The cause of the fire is not definitely known, but sparks from the locomotive of the 3.30 pasenger train from Portland is believed to have started a grass fire which ran into the lumber piles. A trail of fires along the Grand Trunk from Lewiston Junction, supposed to be caused by the same engine, was a Memorial Day record along the line.

Only a small part of the lumber in the yard was destroyed, and the factory will continue as usual in full time with only a slight inconvenience.

South Paris 3; Buckfield 1

A closely played game on the high school grounds was a big attraction, Saturday afternoon. Paris High won over Buckfield High in a contest where Starbird, Curtis and Bob Shaw played strong with the stick for extra bases. Both teams worked fast, the rival twirlers, Atkinson and Bob Shaw were in fine form with excellent support. Only five clean hits were allowed by either pitcher. Shaw had the big end of the strike-outs with 14 against 5 by Atkinson. The score:

MORNING

In the first faint flush of dawn,
How sweet the moments seem,
How restful: the silence unbroken,
Save by the purling mountain stream.
And murmuring forest leaves,
Whose sounds are nature's music,
That are borne, softly
On the morning breeze.
But hark! from forest nook
Rises one clear, sweet note like call of bell,
And now the feathered songsters wake one by one
And trill forth sweet notes of prayer and praise.

Mother and Children Grateful

In East Boston, Mass., at 23 Lamson Street a contented family of three children and the mother live, daily thanking in silence the kind neighbor who helped them when they were sick. Mrs. Nellie Woodford is the mother and she writes the following letter to Dr. J. F. True & and Co.: "Having heard about your medicine from my neighbors and druggist, I wondered if your Dr. True's Elixir wasn't what I needed. I am a hard-working women, working six hours every day for the Penn Reality Trust Company in Boston. In doing this work I use a lot of strength. Besides this looking after my house and the care of my three children wore me out.

I guess my nerves got out of kilt first. I worried a lot, and seemed to get tired easy. I lost my appetite. I was over taken with dizzy spells, my eyes got blurred, and I soon found I had to stay home from work. I didn't do any housework, but the rest didn't do any good.

I always had one special doctor for myself and children, but he was out of town when I was sick. I took medicine from the druggist which my friends brought in, but nothing did any good. My bowels were out of order. My breath bad, and I was shaky all over. Worst of all the terrible headaches came. It seemed I had suffered years before your Dr. True's Elixir was brought in to me by a neighbor.

After a short time I began to cheer up and be myself again. My bowels were soon in order and I noticed that the dizzy spells had left me. I think your Elixir wonderful. I am working every day now getting stronger and picking up my appetite. I feel full of gratitude toward Dr. True's Elixir.

The children sometimes eat things which don't agree with them, when I am not around to see, and then cramps and constipation follow. I just get out my bottle of Dr. True's Elixir and find no trouble in getting them to take some. It is easy to take. Their bowels are soon all right. It may interest you to know that recently my youngest child was terribly sick and it was a serious case. We all have your Elixir to thank for relieving her of stomach worms. When I gave it to Louise it acted like magic, and fixed her only after two doses."

Signs of worms are: Constipation, hardened fullbelly, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, offensive breath, and occasional pains, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nostrils, and short dry coughs, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever. If your children show any of these symptoms, start giving Dr. True's Elixir, The Family Laxative and Worm Expeller at once. It has done wonders for children and grownups since 1851. AT ALL DEALERS.

"Everything to make Harmony"

All people of normal intelligence have the power to think and reason. A few practice it. Words that are the result of analytical thought possess the force and power which drives the human activity of the world. Those that are babbled thoughtlessly and without reason fall upon fertile soil and are magnified into mountains of iniquity that reach even to the gates of eternity. Think twice and speak once. It is the better way.

A special feature of the built-in oven cook stove is the heat-retaining oven. Give it thirty minutes of quick heat—close the damper and turn the burner off. All the heat is retained in the oven until the food is to be served.

PLEASANT REMINISCENCES

By Joseph Andrews of Hurley, S. Dakota

Dear Advertiser:—The obituary notice in the Advertiser of April 23rd on the death of Mrs. Franie I. Holmes brings to my mind incidents that happened in my boyhood days while living in "Old Lovell town."

Dr. George P. Jones and wife (nee Stearns) and their cute little twin daughters lived near neighbors of mine during the four years that they lived in Lovell, after their return from Ebensburg, Pa. He bought a timber lot adjoining what is now the poor farm, cleared up a few acres, built a small house, barn and cooper shop, and put in his spare time making shook for the West Indian molasses trade which was for many years one of the leading industries of Maine.

John Heald, a brother of Abel and Josiah Heald early learned the dentist trade and was located for many years at Portland. I think it was about 1856 or 1857 that Josiah Heald, a brother-in-law of Mr. Jones, having learned the dentist trade of his brother John sold the big white house at Lovell Center to his brother Abel and moved to Portland where he followed his profession for many years.

Dr. Jones learned the dentist trade in Portland with his brother-in-law Heald, while his family lived upon the little Lovell farm, and when he sold the farm and moved to Norway in 1864 he went as a full fledged dentist. Although I never met him after he moved away, I have no doubt but that he made good in his chosen profession.

That Dr. Jones and his good wife, a daughter of good old Deacon Stearns and wife, had better than royal blood in their veins is proven by the high praise given to their daughter, Mrs. Holmes, in the obituary notice of her death above referred to.

Dr. Jones dearly loved a good joke, when it was on the other fellow, and I have no doubt but that he enjoyed many a good laugh over the time he fooled me into eating a choice bit of big onion by asking me if I liked turnip, a piece of which he seemed to be chewing with great relish. The tears I shed on that occasion were plentiful and briney, but the experience learned by that event was in the language of the street, "Well worth the money paid."

One more incident and I will close.

One warm midsummer day while at school a lot of us school kids spent our noonday intermission down by the shore of the lake. There was a secret council held by some of the "war lords" of the party. Then there was a rush past me, and one of the boys pulled off my straw and sent it sailing over the lake where it soon sank to rise no more, and I went back to school a hatless as well as a barefoot boy. My folks refused to buy me a new hat, for they said it might go the same way the other one had gone, and I probably would have gone all that summer bareheaded to school but for the kindness of one lady, Mrs. Josiah Heald (nee Jones) a sister of Dr. Jones, who called me in as I was going past her home one morning and gave me a nice straw hat, which I wore with pride and pleasure all the balance of that season.

Dr Heald soon moved to Portland with his family where his wife died a few years later I was a green and bashful boy, and because I was Uncle Ike's boy I was made fun of by some of my boy companions as well as by some of the grownups whose hair was growing gray, and the kindness of Mrs. Heald made a deep impression on my childish mind. The events herein recorded are as bright and clear in my memory today as when first photographed upon my brain more than 65 years ago, and I felt that:

"When time that steals our years away
Shall steal our pleasures, too,
The memory of the past will stay
And half our joys renew."

IT'S ECONOMY

To Get Good Quality

Everybody knows clothing as well as everything else is high priced; the worst of it is, there doesn't seem to be any relief in sight. Workers in every industry are asking for increased wages; everything is costing more.

We've felt that our duty was to keep clothing costs down as low as we possibly could; we've been doing it by having nothing but fine all wool clothes; clothes that will save because they last longer; we priced them very close.

We're selling clothes on a closer margin of profit than ever before. We're doing our best to keep prices down and still "get by" and go on doing business.

Suits at $40 to $60 that will save you money.

EAST STONEHAM

36th Anniversary

Hiawatha Lodge, No. 49 celebrated by giving a dance, May 19th, and many of its members, (of which it has over one hundred) and friends, made merry. Norway, Lovell, Waterford and other towns were well represented among the dancers.

Jonathan Bartlett was its first Chancellor Commander and Bert Littlefield was Prelate for many years. These, with a splendid group of real workers, built and paid for their hall which is prettily located in East Stoneham Village. This lodge seemed to prosper from the beginning and real cooperation is its motto to-day.

A short time ago a new piano was purchased, which was quickly paid for by giving entertainments and dances. Just now they are busy grading the grounds which will not only be handy for parking autos, but will make a pleasing background for their hall. This will take quite a lot of money. However, a nice sum is being raised from their series of dances of which Solon McAllister, Fred McKeen and Willis Warren are committees.

One amusing feature which pleases everybody is the "give away chocolates" on Boston Fancy. The committee has arranged to hand out four boxes in a similar manner at their next dance as it adds to the fun and enjoyment of all.

Several from town attended the auction at the John Akers farm, Errol. The farm has been sold to Albert Bean.

The supper at the Library was a success financially,—proceeds to go to the school league.

A social dance was held at the Grange hall, Saturday evening.

Ed. Warren, Jim and Ban Barnett have gone to Prince Edwards Island.

At the next Grange meeting, Saturday evening, June 5th, the question for discussion is, "Would you like to see Upton celebrate Maine's centenial, if so in what way?" It is hoped every member will attend.

NEW PENSION BILL

The new pension bill passed by Congress and signed by the President became effective May 1st, provides a pension of $50 per month for every veteran of the Civil War who served 90 days or more in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps and was honorably discharged, or having served less than 90 days, was discharged for disability incurred in the service, in the line of duty; also for soldiers who served 60 days or more in the war with Mexico, and is now entitled to a pension of less than $50.

Maimed soldiers who have lost one hand or one foot, or been totally disabled in the same will receive a pension of $60 per month. If they have lost an arm at or above the elbow, or a leg at or above the knee, or been totally disabled in the same shall receive $65 per month. If they have lost an arm at the shoulder joint or a leg at the hip joint, or where the condition is such as to prevent the use of an artificial limb the rate of pension will be $72 per month. Those who have lost one hand and one foot, or been totally disabled in the same, will receive $90 per month.

Those who now, or hereafter may become, by reason of age and physical or mental disability, helpless or blind or so nearly helpless or blind as to require the regular personal aid and attendance of another person will be entitled to a pension of $72 per month.

Widows and Army Nurses, and all dependent parents of any officer or enlisted man, who served in the Civil War and was entitled to a pension, will receive $30 per month.

The above is a brief statement of the provisions of the new Pension Bill, known as the Fuller Bill.

MILK AND SUGAR

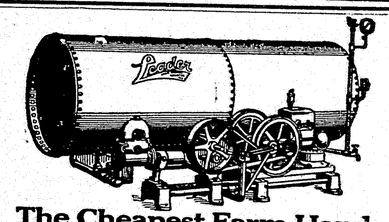

American people have been accused of consuming too much sugar the year past—even if this is impossible today—and rather unjustly, too. For the figures, while they do not lie, give a wrong impression unless one is acquainted with where the increased amounts have gone. The secret is that the condensed milk factories have worked overtime, stimulated by war needs, cost plus payments and expectancy of tremendous orders from abroad after the war was ended.

Condensed milk contains 40 per cent. of sugar. The production of this commodity, together with evaporated milk, gained over a million pounds in three years closing in 1919, and while exports increased they were not in proportion. Now the army and navy need far less.

Have you a child of school age? Then give a thought to our public schools. Let the principal and the teachers understand that they are in your mind and that you are appreciative of the good work they are doing in training your child to meet the intellectual problems of life. If you plant a rose bush and it flourishes and blooms your neighbors see it and appreciate its fragrance and beauty. The instructors of our children are of infinitely more importance than the choicest flower that ever bloomed. Let us give them the recognition and the attention and encouragement that is their due. Their lives will be sweeter and their work better, and in after years your child will be the beneficiary of your thoughtfulness and attention and their faithfulness to duty.

You don't know a man if you haven't worked for him.

On Verge of Breakdown, Mrs. Dion Takes Tanlac and Troubles Are Over

"I was right on the verge of a physical breakdown when I started taking Tanlac," said Mrs. Clara Dion, who resides at 1155 Elm Street, Manchester, N. H., recently. Continuing she said:

"For two years I have been suffering from a severe stomach trouble, and my appetite was so poor that it hardly seemed possible for a grown person to survive on the little I ate, and I finally got so bad that just the odor of anything cooking would nauseate me. I lost a great deal of weight, and was so weak and ran down it was with the greatest effort I could do my housework and at the end of the day I could barely drag one foot after the other, and at times I would have such weak spells I would be compelled to catch hold of something to keep from falling. For some time I have also suffered terribly from sharp pains in my side and back, which made it very difficult for me to stoop, and kept me in misery all the time.

"I had taken many different medicines, but none of them did me a particle of good, and I had become very much discouraged. However, after seeing so many statements in the newspapers where Tanlac had benefited others I decided to give it a trial, and my improvement since I began taking it has simply been remarkable. I had taken but a few doses when my appetite had improved so I could eat three hearty meals a day and enjoy them. I continued taking Tanlac until now I can eat anything I want and everything agrees with me perfectly, and I have not had the least sign of those dreadful pains in my side and back since I began taking it. I have regained my strength so that I can do all my own housework for my house of eleven rooms with the greatest ease. I do not feel tired and worn out any more and am always full of energy. Tanlac has done me so much good I am glad of the opportunity to say a good word for it."

Tanlac is sold in Norway by A. L. Clark Drug Co., in West Paris by S. T. White, and by O. H. Haskell, Sweden, R. F. D. from Harrison.

TOO MUCH MONEY

Sometimes we wonder if it is good for the American people to have so much money. Of course the natural instinct of a man is to accumulate as much money as possible, and money is a decided necessity these days. But it is possible to have too much of a good thing.

The war has made America fabulously rich, the envy of all nations. Men who in 1914 had nothing now are comfortably well off. Others who had a modest sum six years ago are now rolling in wealth. The result? You see it every day. In the cities it is more apparent than in the country towns. In the big cities no manufacturer will produce, no middle man will distribute, and no merchant will sell an article at a reasonable profit. All seem to want to get rich quick.

Employees demand prohibitive wages, work about as they please, and in many cases are becoming about as inefficient as could be imagined. Instead of the employer being the master of his own business, his hired help practically tells him where he gets off.

The war produced the profiteer, and for the sake of easy money he refuses to loosen his grip upon the country.

Buildings are thrown together in slipshod manner and inferior materials are used, all for the sake of cutting expenses and increasing profits to abnormal. In the manufacturing world it is the same. Quality is sacrificed for profits, or where quality does prevail the price becomes almost prohibitive. Of course there are some exceptions to this rule, but the exceptions are few and difficult to find.

The ease with which money has been accumulated during the past six years has produced this state of affairs. It is not condusive to the future welfare of our country, but we have faith in America and in American people.

We are in the temporary grip of a hysterical mania for the rapid accumulation of wealth, but we believe that this mania will pass away in time and permit a return to the sane and rational methods which prevailed prior to the outbreak of the war. But it will require time and we must employ infinite patience in bringing it about. Americans are too sensible to travel far on the road that leads to destruction. Even the lure of unlimited gold can not deprive them entirely of their common sense.—Anonymous.

WHY CONGRESS DON'T

"Why don't congress do something?" That is the threadbare inquiry we hear day by day from many tongues. It may refer to one thing, or it may concern another. Why don't congress do something? The answer is very simple, very tragic—because we do nothing ourselves. We send a representative to congress and we expect him to consider our wishes, to do our bidding. Then we close our mouths and sit down and wait for him to "do something."

But what is he to do? How is he to know what we want done? Does he ever hear from us?

While we are comfortably warming our chairs other interests—foreign to us—are getting busy with Mr. Congressman. They are very agreeable to him, very enticing; and very tenacious—they never let go. Their interests are kept before that congressman day by day, hour by hour. Ours are lying dormant in the chairs we are warming. The congressman seldom hears of them.

Senators and congressmen are adepts at passing the buck. So long as the buck is kept moving it does none of them any particular harm, but once it slows up it is liable to cause an explosion. And they don't like explosions. It is safer to start the buck on again. Occasionally, between bucks, they do a little work, because they all want to go back to Washington again.

But that is all our fault. We put them there, and then we promptly pass the buck. We leave it to others to give them their instructions, to tell them what we want done. We go to sleep at home, and the congressman, of course, follows our example and goes to sleep in Washington.

That's the reason congress doesn't "do something." If each voter in the district would write an occasional letter to our Congressman and acquaint him with the needs of the district, and our attitude on public questions, then the congressman would have no occasion or excuse for passing the buck.

He would have to buck up, instead.

Despite all the talk we hear about flying being as safe as motoring the fact must remain that unlike railroad or automobile accidents, the mishap in the air is always accompanied by the additional menace of gravitation. Relatively perhaps there would be no more mishaps among 1,000 airplanes flying for a year every day than there would be among 1,000 automobiles in use on all kinds of highways for the same period. Yet it must be conceded that in addition to all other chances for trouble that may be shared by the land vehicle, the aircraft must also reckon, as previously stated, upon the laws of gravitation. What goes up must come down and with the science of flying it all depends upon whether the descent is voluntary or involuntary. As compared with the number of automobiles the number of airships is but a drop in the bucket at present. If there were an equal number buzzing around in the ether it is pretty hard to figure out the accident liability.

The bright sunshine of summer days dispels the spirit of gloom and instills a feeling of gladness in the human heart. It makes the bright side of life even brighter and enables us to see the goodness which warms the hearts of our fellow men. It diverts our thoughts into pleasant channels and drives out the shadows which have enshrouded us during the winter months. Welcome the sunshine of summer days, for its warm rays produce both the joy and the sustenance of life.

Don't condemn the swaggering boy too severely. He is not responsible for his own existence nor is he responsible for the traits of character which put the swagger into his step. Heredity and environment often make or break a boy in the making. Even those whose home life is not as it should be may have their characters strengthened and developed through the kindness of others. A word of sympathy and cheer to the lad on the street is a long step toward the moulding of the character of the man of the future.

An auction will be held Saturday, June 12, at one o'clock at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Field, Alpine street, Norway. Sale includes household goods, carpenter tools, and garden tools.

Carriage Shop Fire

A brisk fire started Wednesday forenoon on the shingle roof of Bert Millett's blacksmith and carriage shop located on Church street, a short distance west of Deering Memorial church. The department responded quickly, but the flames spread rapidly and a large surface blazed furiously before water could be applied effectively. With a strong wind blowing the chances to save the property and the adjoining houses appeared far remote.

The damage is largely confined to timbers and boards on one corner as they are charged and beyond use. Water soaked the interior directly under the blaze, but fortunately nothing of great value was reached. A spark from the chimney is believed to have caused the fire.

FIRMLY HELD

Just what power holds the solar system together and controls the movements of the sun and planets in their paths as they go whirling together in the mad pace of miles and miles a second the wisest scientists cannot tell. But there is every reason to confidently believe that the plan of the entire universe is a perfect one and is designed to run on forever with very few accidents and cross signals. Many times has the prophecy been made that the world would come to end on a certain date, and some impressionable people have given full credence to the announcement and prepared for the smash, millenium, or whatever they called it.

The sensation of the final catastrophe that was, in the minds of some quasi (or crazy) scientists, to happen to this mundane sphere on the 17th of December was sprung rather too suddenly to have much effect on those susceptible to panics of fear; but it roused quite a ripple of interest. It was figured out rather plausibly that the relative positions of the planets were most unusual with six of them on one side of the sun, only one on the other, and the earth in a bad position to withstand the unbalanced influence. If this had been pointted out five years ago, and excitement worked up to a high pitch, there might have been a general belief that our old footstool would be knocked out from under us. But public attention has been so taken up by the war and other things that the public failed to become impressed with the dangerous configuration.

It is just as well as it turned out, however, for the 17th of December passed without as much of a celebration as occurs on the 17th of March or any other holiday. So there was nothing in the scare after all. And why should there be? If we liken the planets in their orbits to the trolley cars that run on different lines we need not fear any clash or mix up between them. The same power drives them all in their respective paths, or tracks, and there is not the slightest reason to think they are liable to some day go flying off the handle and land in the ditch of destruction.—Argus.

It has been several years since anyone died from overwork.

AMERICAN EAGLE

The bald-headed eagle, or the American eagle, as it is more popularly known, the country's National bird and emblem, is rapidly being exterminated. Unless something is done, ornithologists point out, to prevent the destruction of this great bird, which is now going on, it will become so scarce that it may ultimately become extinct.

It is in Alaska that the American eagle is the most abundant today, and it is there that the finest specimens are to be found. It is in Alaska, too, that the eagle is in the gravest danger of extermination. In April, 1917, the Territorial Legislature of Alaska placed a bounty of 50 cents a head for every eagle and other birds of prey killed. Up to the end of April, 1919, in less than two years it is estimated that 5,600 eagles have been killed. They were, it was maintained, destructive to game, salmon and birds.

It was only recently that ornithologists awoke to the gravity of the situation confronting the eagles. The American Ornithooligist Union, an organization of about 1,000 members composed of naturalists and scientists scattered everywhere throughout the United States has now become aroused to the danger. The Museum of Natural History and other scientific institutions are interested in the preservation of the eagle, and ornithologists everywhere are anxious to do something to save the bird from extermination.

The bald eagle is anything but a prolific breeder; it raises not more than one or two young in a brood, and cannot raise a brood every year. The birds build their nests in big trees or in tall cliffs along the sea coasts. Their nests are three or four feet in diameter and are very conspicuous. In hunting the birds natives seek the nests. The old birds will fight to protect their young and when the nests are attacked they hover about them. In this manner the parent birds are shot by the natives, who then dispatch the young eaglets. The eagle is not a very clever or wary bird, neither is he a fast flyer, and it is not always a difficult matter for hunters to slay him.

"The bald eagle," an ornthologist said, "although a bird of prey, is not as destructive as has been represented. Smaller birds such as the hawk do far more damage. It feeds on fish preferably and principally on dead fish. It sometimes persues a fish hawk in order to steal the fish which the latter has captured from the water. The bald eagle is useful since it destroys jackrabbits, ground squirrels and other destructive animals.

It is not so much because of his alleged destructiveness, but because of a desire to obtain the bounty that he is being hunted and slain so widely in Alaska. He is our largest bird of prey and in many respects the most striking and the most splendid. Many false tales have been told and circulated about him. He has been pictured as ferocious when, in truth, he has no natural enemies. He might be tempted to carry off a very young lamb, but tales of his carrying off babies and very young children are untrue and unjust.

"He is our National bird. He appears on our coins and currency, on our Country's coat of arms and seals, his golden replica tops the staffs on which our Flag is strung. He has been an inspirations to millions of good Americans, and is the natural pet and companion of Uncle Sam. Unless measures are taken to prevent his extermination in a short time he will become as scarce as the buffalo. We are a wasteful nation. We were for a long time indifferent to the destruction of the buffalo, and now we are spending thousands of dollars on reservations to bring him back. We should save the eagle."

The bald eagle used to nest in every state in the Union. It is found all over North America, as far north as the Arctic regions, on the sea coasts, lakes and rivers. Until recently American eagles were quite common in Florida, and a few years ago an ornithologist saw many there. Now they are extremely scarce because they have been slain indiscriminately by reckless hunters. Many have been slain just for the fun of it, or because a hunter could not resist the temptation to bring to earth such a prize.

Although Federal laws protect song birds and insect destroying birds, they do not adquately protect, it is said, bald eagles which are birds of prey.

The bald eagle if left alone often lives to a green old age. They live to be 50 or 100 years old. They have lived in captivity to the latter age. An ornithologist said that because of the great age attained by eagles many people on seeing the same mistook it for a new one. He explained that a man living in a certain locality who saw an eagle and then did not see an eagle again for 10 or more years, on seeing it naturally mistook it for a new eagle. The bald eagle averages three feet in length and seven feet from tip to tip of its wings when outspread. There are bald eagles which are larger.

GIVE THE HOGS A FISH COURSE

The common domestic pig will never be able to write a book on table manners, but he knows how to order a meal as well as anyone. He is in a fair way to demand a fish course to supplement his salad and vegetable diet. He will take his fish in the form of fish meal, the refined by-product made from sound, wholesome raw material at the sardine, tuna, and salmon canneries, or from the menhaden.

The fish meal is not to be confused with "fish scrap," a coarser by-product much used for fertilizer; the meal is made from clean, sound material and is intended to be used as food for cattle and hogs. Formerly, the cannery waste was all made into "scrap" for fertilizer purposes, but the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, knowing the extremely high protein content of the scrap, has been active in converting this material into a high grade protein feed. The cleaned, selected portion is ground to a fine, palatable meal which may be used to replace tankage in hog, poultry, or dairy rations.

Fish meal has been recommended as a supplementary ration before now, but popular prejudice against a badly prepared product has discouraged its use. The Department of Agriculture has proved by feeding experiemnts that fish meal equals the high-priced tankage as a ration ingredient, and better methods of selecting and milling have removed the causes of prejudice.

The oil content of the meal adds materially to its feeding value. So far the experiments have shown that the meal does not taint the animals product, whether it be pork, butter, eggs, or milk. Moreover, by diverting the fish meals to his animals instead of supplying it directly to his land as fertilizer, the farmer loses but a trifle of its fertilizing value and gains its entire feeding value—thus making the material yield two profits in the place of one.

A Lovell woman refuses to call it sauer kraut, as she hates the German language. So she refers to it as table silage.

Mr. and Mrs. Randall Porter and daughter Emma with Mrs. Sadie McLucas of Rumford were here Sunday calling on friends.

Every community has its spirit. With some it is one of honor and integrity and progressive intellectuality. With others the spirit of greed, gouge, repression and retrogression predominates. The first attains its aim in life, while the latter aims no higher than that which it attains. We of this community have our choice. We can progress with the march of time, or we can procrastinate while time marches by. This is an age when men do things, or they do nothing. There is no middle of the road course. The man who has the will to grasp his opportunities also has the power to make them. That is what we should do.

I greet thee with uncovered head
Remembering many a thunderous fight
When lightening death between us sped.
I clasp the hand that made my scars,
I cheer the flag my foeman bore
I shout for joy to see the stars
All on one common shield once more."

And so my friends, in the days which are to come, as America leads in the progress of the world, and we enjoy her institutions and freedom, we shall not forget to turn reverently to the old blue coat that made these things possible. All honor to these heroes of '61, long may they live, long live the republic which they so gallantly defended!

Today, also, we recall the services of those men, who in the days of 1898, veterans of the Spanish American War, volunteered their services in the name of freedom, establishing the fact that this country is the champion and defender of weaker peoples striving for freedom and liberty. Although their services were not so extended as those of the men of '61, those services were given with the same degree of devotion, loyalty, and patriotism, and so we hail them with honor for their sacrifices and privations in defense of the republic and the principles which we love.

Friends, recall with me statements uttered by a certain sovereign in Europe during the years of 1915-1916, a man who boasted of being a statesman and leader of an invincible army, to the effect that America had best look out for herself after he had conquered Europe, that America would be unable to take part in the world conflict, since she would be unable to get an army across the seas for he had them blocked by submarines, moreover, were they able to get an army across they would be of no use in a military sense because they would be untrained men, and berating us in every breath.

Oh, what a mistake! He had failed to appreciate the fact that in this beautiful country of ours we raise men, not brutes, men of brain and brawn, who can fight when they have a righteous principle to uphold, the result of which demonstrated to the world that American brain, American brawn, and American manhood, could accomplish in one year what it took Germany to accomplish in three generations. Oh, William Hohenzollern, once you were King and Emperor of the mighty German Empire, today, you are simply Bill Hohenzollern, a fugitive from justice, despised and detested by the civilized world, thanks to the glorious achievements of the boys of 1917, heroes of the world war, to whom it is our honor today to pay tribute. And you and I my friend, living in this little town of Norway, nestled among these Oxford hills, should feel a thrill of joy and pride within us in the thought that no company of men assisted more in ridding the world of the power of that arch-criminal and saving civilization than old Company D and the boys of Norway, Maine.

What a thrill must have swept through the hearts of the peoples of Europe when you lads took your places along side the boys of England and France and the stars and stripes were unfurled along side the Union Jack and the Tri-Color over the battle fields of France.

It was your distinction to be the first American army to be seen upon European soil. You did your task well, and words fail me to express a worthy tribute to your wonderful achievement. We who remained on this side never had any doubts as to the result once you were given an opportunity. Without the aid of the allies, you and you alone, in time would have beaten the Kaiser and his Potsdam Gang of Pirates.

Not all of you men were permitted to cross the seas, but, nevertheless, you played an important part in the conflict. The very fact that you were in the training camps awaiting the word was an important factor in hastening victory. You were eager and willing to make any sacrifice, and your spirit and patriotism is not differential from that of those who trod the fields of France and Flanders. There is no distinction, but we hail you one and all as the saviours of civilization.

As it was your honor and accomplishment to defeat the forces of autocracy and class rule on the battle fields of France, and Flanders, the American people turn and appeal to you now in this hour of national peril to defeat those forces of anarchy and disorder and to preserve Americanism and those principles for which you fought and which these men before you founded.

Our thoughts also turn, with yours, today, to those poor comrades who fought shoulder to shoulder with you in the great conflict, but were not permitted to return, whose graves dot the hills and vales of France and Flanders, three thousand miles from home, giving their all for humanity, and while it is not our privilege to place above those forms, the banner which they loved, our earnest prayer is that the spring time sun may kiss and nature's wild flowers deck the countless graves of those who sleep in foreign soil.

"By peaceful flowing river
On sunkissed grassy hill
In glades where sun-beams quiver
In woods where shadows thrill.
On Belgium's sunny border
By France's blood red streams
They halted at God's order
That laid them down to dreams.
Their long last march is ended
Their last encampment made
They sleep all undefended
Beyond all fear of raid.
They rest in blessed slumber
They hear no bugle call
A host whom none can number
Save him who numbers all."

We have, I believe, my friends, these sentiments in common for the heroes of the world war, honor to all, with tears of joy for the living, tears of regret and love for those who sleep.

Over half a century of years have passed since the men of '61 were summoned in defense of their country. Those years raised this country to the highest pinnacle of fame, but serious dangers confronted us in 1898 and more serious dangers during the last few years, all of which were faced with patriotism and success. And today we are facing problems that are as dangerous as were those which tested the patriotism of the men we are now honoring. Shall we meet the test? Those heroes fought for self-determination and a free government, but they also wanted an orderly government, a government of laws. It is such a government that they have handed us the guardianship. Today we should ask ourselves if we are fulfilling the trust.

The boys of 1917 fought and defeated autocratic government, which had proved unfit for the world, and my friends, while we boast, take pride, and are devoted to our own democratic government, and are absolutely right in the belief that it is the best government ever devised by man, let us not at the same time, as intelligent men and women, be blind to the perils which arise from such a government and which are upon this day threatening it.

The fundamental principal of American democracy is local self-government. Thus we must arrive at the conclusion that this government is without a central authority. That political authority upon which the Old World has always depended in times of risings and revolts is entirely lacking. Now the greatest peril arising from such a government is an intensified spirit of self will, which is prevalent in this country today.

This spirit of self-will has manifested itself in various examples. At this time let us recall the condition which brought about the Civil War. The tendency toward local self-government separated the country into two sections, north and south, slavery embittered the conflict between the two, war followed, the cost of which in life and treasure it is impossible to estimate. True, the result proved the power of democracy to enforce its will once that will is thoroughly aroused, but, my friend, the very fact that such a struggle existed bears witness to the peril which the enforcement of National will may at any time involve and let us beware lest history repeats itself.

It seems to me that a great deal of our trouble and discontent in this country today is due to direction and leadership. There are types of leaders which are peculiar to our American democracy which aggravate its perils and they have existed since the birth of the nation. They are chiefly and were so classified years ago by a statesman, the demagogue, "the boss," the "plutocrat," and what we might term, "the medicine man," or possibly a more modern term would be "bolshevist."

Happily the boss and the plutocrat are giving us little trouble at present, or the other two are playing such an important roll that the boss and plutocrat are of minor importance.

The demagogue is to democracy what the courtier was in olden times to the king, he lives by flattering his sovereignty. The American sovereign in America is the majority, and the demagogue assures his sovereignty that he can do no harm. He does not hesitate, but is forever trying his utmost to excite classes against classes, and sections against section, in order to accomplish his object, thus the demagogue stirs men's passions that should be soothed, stimulates local hostilities that should be pacified and most damaging of all his activities, he intensifies this spirit of self-will that should be corrected and restrained.

The other type of leader, which we may label the medicine man or bolshevist, is playing a threatening roll, to a great extent under cover. The term medicine man may be easily applied since he seems to believe he has a cure for all evils to which humanity and government are subject, but the man who believes that all evils are due to one social or political cause and can be cured by one social or political reform has studied human nature in a very limited field. And, yet, there are those who would not listen to the demagogue, the boss, or the plutocrat, but they are easily swayed by this medicine man simply because he appeals to their conscience and sympathies and their consciences and sympathies lack training and education.

Such are some of the leaders which add to our perils, and the only way in which to eliminate them is by central authority. Now this central authority of which I speak will not be found in the central authority of a Caesar, nor a Kaiser, nor in aristocracy, nor a church, nor a president, it can only be found in the recognition of every individual citizen that he owes this government some of his time, thought and energy. That he cannot live for self alone, but that this is an age of service to one's fellowmen.

The time has come, my friends, when every one must take a part in this government and its protection. We can no longer shirk the responsibilities. I do not mean by this that we should rush into every political battle for glory or gain, far from it, but we must take our part in politics, and see that they are kept clean and right. It undoubtedly will be necessary for us to align ourselves with political parties. Our government necessitates parties, but the man, whether he be president, senator, or private citizen, who places his party, or his own personal ambition, before his country is a traitor to his country and the sooner we ship such trade out in leaky boats, the better. The time has come when we should assert the independence of the individual voter and prove that the party was made for the voter and not the voter for party.

Today, my friends, true Americanism and liberty are being put to test. Will they stand? The lawless outbreaks throughout this republic during the last few months point to the decay of liberty and Americanism, for true liberty and Americanism is unthinkable without respect for law. The supremacy of law is the highest guarantee of freedom.

There are in this country certain leaders preaching and inculcating into the minds of certain groups and classes, Bolshevistic tendencies, which seek to wreck Americanism and establish a despotism such as the world has never seen. Its aim seems not to work in the opening for it hasn't the courage, but it seeks like a hidden disease to sap the vitality of the nation below the resisting point.

What shall we do? Shall we crush it? Shall we make it unfit for disciples of this creed to do business here? Or shall we with indifference and fear allow it to get foot-hold?

In the early days of the late war when the enemy in their temporary victory were marching in confidence toward Paris and the French army battered and weary and worn were with anxiety and dread slowly and stubbornly resisting and retreating there finally came a moment when their beloved commander, General Joffre, whose name cannot be spoken today without a deep feeling of reverence, with his back against the wall, and his mind well knowing that the hour of life or death to his beloved country had come, cried out with all the agony of a Nation's safety in his heart "They shall not pass." The retreating ranks of the French army solidified, and the advance of the German army was halted—the war was won.

In this critical time in our national history, to those who seek to destroy the institutions which we love, to undermine our government, and to substitute for the rights of the individual and the supremacy of the law the rule of the mob, we Americans cry out in no uncertain tones to all alike "They shall not pass."

This government for which our loved ones have sacrificed and died shall be what it always has been and pray God what it always will be, an American government "of the people, for the people, and by the people," and by our blood if need be it shall not perish from the earth.

My friends, in the days which are to come, as we listen to the music of the voices of these leaders and read perhaps by chance their theories written in glowing words of their substitute for Americanism, and feel perhaps for a moment the compelling touch of their hypnotic influence, pray God, oh, pray God, that when we are released from the spell, that there will come to our minds other scenes and other voices. May we remember that by the sacrifices of the men we today honor, God has given us happy homes, wonderful institutions, the greatest country, and the best government known to civilization. Then with all the strength of patriotism within us, inspired by the heroes of '61, strengthened by the heroes of '98, and sustained by the heroes of 1917, we will hurl back to them the challenge that there is room in America for but one flag, the American Flag, that we have no use for any red flag unless along with it goes the white, the blue, and the stars, and old glory which we received from these men without a rent we will hand down to future generations without a stain.

"Hail, brightest banner that floats on the gale
Flag of the country of Washington, hail.
Bright are thy stars as the sun on the wave,
Red are thy stripes as the blood of the brave.
Wrapt in thy folds are the hopes of the free,
Banner of Washington, blessings on thee."

The world needs more modesty and less madness.

BRYANT'S POND

Paid Fitting Tribute

Another day has passed with its decorations and its tributes sacred to the memories of our loyal soldiery who have been called home. On parade at this memorial in our little village were but six who have in the past affiliated with the old A. M. Whitman Post, which formerly numbered forty-eight in its honored membership. Monday was ushered in as an ideal day, clear in the sunshine and beauty of the year. In the observance of this memorial a large number of people were in attendance at all of the services, which occupied the afternoon wholly.

At 2 o'clock the line of parade was halted at the entrance of the little cemetery near the Universalist Church and proper ceremonies were held at each soldier's mound by members of the Post and American Legion. Services were opened in the Opera House at 3 o'clock. Rev. C. R. Upton, pastor of the Baptist Church, offered an impressive prayer at the opening of the service. The voluntary program in its appropriateness, given by the school children, was fully appreciated. The day's service was completed by an able and eloquent address by Rev. Chester Gore Miller of South Paris.

The marshal of the day was James L. Bowker, former Commander of A. M. Whitman Post. The members of Jackson-Silver Post of the American Legion ably assisted in the afternoon service, while in the forenoon they took part in the department service at the village of Locke's Mills. The Bryant's Pond band, numbering fourteen men, headed the parade and furnished music at the decoration service.

F. Moody, Jr. The school children from Hebron Sanatorium gave a patriotic exercise, the girls carrying wreathes and the boys flags, which was much appreciated. NORWAY MEDICINE COMPANY

PAINS NEARLY DOUBLED ME UP

Nothing Helped Me Until I Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wyandotte, Mich.—"For the last four years I have doctored off and on without help. I have had pains every month so bad that I would nearly double up. Sometimes I could not sweep a room without stopping to rest, and everything I ate upset my stomach. Three years ago I lost a child and suffered so badly that I was out of my head at times. My bowels did not move for days and I could not eat without suffering. The doctor could not help me and one day I told my husband that I could not stand the pain any longer and sent him to the drug-store to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and threw the doctor's medicine away. After taking three bottles of Vegetable Compound and using two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash I could do my own housework. If it had not been for your medicine I don't know where I would be today and I am never without a bottle of it in the house. You may publish this if you like that it may help some other woman."—Mrs. MARY STENDER, 120 Orange St., Wyandotte, Mich.

No More Corn Suffering

"Gets-It" Never Leaves a Corn On Any Foot For Very Long.

The hurting "pep" goes right out of that corn the moment a few drops of "Gets-It" lands thereon. It is through, and "for keeps."

Corns and "Gets-It" Can't Live Together

You'll have no more pain but will notice the corn getting loose and wobbly. In a day or so, you lift it right off without any feeling. That's the end of the corn and of your troubles. Millions have proved "Gets-It" to be the one and only unfailing, common sense corn remover. Why not you?

"Gets-It" costs but a trifle at any drug store and carries a money-back guarantee. Mf'd. by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

Sold in Norway and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by F. P. Stone.

Red blood

Rich, red blood coursing through your veins is a sure sign of a good digestion. Unless your stomach, liver and other digestive organs are working promptly and thoroughly, the blood cannot assimilate all the nourishment from your food; your energy and vitality are not renewed.

Eat all you want, only avoid too much pastry and rich foods, but be sure to take plenty of time to chew slowly and well. Chewing is the first part of the process of digestion. A teaspoonful of "L.F." Atwood's Medicine occasionally, will purge your system of impurities, and allow only nutritious elements to enter the blood. It will keep your liver active and you will get the full benefit of your food.

Keep a bottle of "L.F." always on hand. It is absolutely harmless under all conditions, and will help young and old alike. It has been a household remedy in many families for three generations. Your dealer sells it for 50c a bottle. If you have never tried it, get a bottle today, "L.F." Medicine Co., Portland, Maine.

NORWAY AND VICINITY

BASEBALL

Norway 5; Oxford 2

A clean, fast game for the opening show in the town leagues was pulled off at Oxford, Saturday afternoon. The game went eleven innings when Norway clinched the bacon on singles by Klain and Parisien with a double by Shepard. Oxford scored two runs in the first inning and that ended it. Norway found the home plate for single runs in the fifth and seventh which tied matters up. In the eleventh session three runs came across, giving Norway the lead and game.

Oxford 16; Norway 7

A return game was played at the fair grounds Monday afternoon before a large crowd with the Norway-Paris band as a special attraction.

Oxford came up to win, and they did the trick in a thorough manner. Slugging the pill in collections of bunched hits, and Norway's critical attack of stage fright were important factors allowing the visitors to pile up the runs with little opposition.

Oxford went after Claude Hunt, the Norway twirler, with a hit and run agreement especially in the first inning. Seven clean singles gave the four earned runs and this opener made a start held until the end. Norway failed to smash into Stone's delivery and scored in the first inning on a base on balls; Parisien's sacrifice and Trafton's single.

Stone held down the slab effectively until the fourth, when Hurst relieved him. Both Oxford pitchers had almost errorless support and from the visitors' standpoint the game was a grand success. Never was the outfit in danger of blowing up.

Norway, to the seventh inning, had been working fairly smoothly. Several dropped flies in the field were excusable errors as the sun was responsible, but the unfortunate seventh put all good intentions in solitary confinement. Pretty crude baseball was the general verdict, which would allow four soft infield misplays to get tangled in four hits, allowing six runners to cross the home pan. This inning was the old story where a razzle dazzle is started and all sense of direction is obliterated. Hunt pitched his head off to stop the awful display of non-support and closed the fracas by striking out two batters. Eleven Oxford men faced him in this inning. Curley was given a try-out in the last two innings and replaced Hunt in the box for Norway.

Trafton's long running catch of a sky scraper from Harry Rowe's bat in the fourth inning was one of the few brilliant stunts pulled off by members of the home delegation. Hunt pitched good ball after limbering up. He passed 3, struck out 10 and was touched for 14 hits in the seven innings. Six bold faced errors were behind him during his working hours.

That Norway had a bad day and Oxford produced a brace of sluggers is no secret. The season is young and the Norwy town outfit is in the process of construction, therefore, all good sports are gambling on futures. The score:

During the festivities a beautiful bouquet of carnations was presented him from the Women's Relief Corps.

Mrs. Sampson had made arrangements for the evening and served refreshments. During the day, Friday, Mr. Cordwell received many friends. Congratulations and greetings were received from the Daughters of Veterans. Captain Whitmarsh and Mr. Cordwell are among Norway's oldest Civil war veterans. Capt. "Go to Church Sunday." This advice has been given millions of times, yet with some it has never been heeded. Possibly there was a flaw in the giving. It may not have contained that simple and appealing note of humanity which draws the one who needs it most. Yet there is no one so hardened and so sinful but what he can enjoy an hour in the church on Sunday. Some who stray in accidentally become regular attendants in time. The story of the Man of Men grips them. It is more thrilling than the wierdest fiction ever penned, and each Sunday you hear a new chapter in the life history of this man who was of flesh and blood and yet was the offspring of divinity. Go to church, Sunday. It will be good for you, and it will do others good to welcome you there.

The Almighty Dollar Is Still Able to Sit Up and Take Notice

With the right care and proper spending it can still be made to give the high cost of buying a healthy argument

All the old-fashioned ring has not been wrung out. There are still some stores in the United States where the dollar does more than picket duty—and this is one of them.

In clothing and furnishings in general for Men and Boys we are giving better values today than any City store can possibly give.

We could ask about 20 per cent. more and still sell at a price that would be no higher and in many cases less than the City stores, and because we don't is one reason why you should have a healthy regard for our methods and merchandise.

BATES—WEST PARIS

The drama "Uncle Josiah," which was presented Friday night for the benefit of the Grange, was a great success and was listened to by a crowded house. The drama was unique and the parts well taken. Mrs. D. A. Grover opened with a piano solo and softly accompanied some parts of the drama. Specialties between acts consisted of a recitation by Lewis J. Mann and two comic hits by Ellis Doble and one by Abner H. Mann. The financial success must have been quite satisfactory, too.

Address By Veteran

Rev. J. H. Little gave a very interesting address Sunday afternoon for the Memorial exercises. He is an old veteran and he knew how to recount the various experiences through which the "boys of '61" went. "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" was sung by the quartette and it reminded him of the circumstances that caused the words to be written, which he related among a number of other instances. In closing, he spoke of the recent big world war. He spoke for an hour and a half.

The male quartette was composed of Chester Briggs, 1st tenor; Clayton A. Churchill, 2nd tenor; Dana A. Grover, 1st bass, and John E. Brock, 2nd bass. Their voices were well balanced and blended finely together. They sang "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," "Just Before the Battle, Mother," and "Under the Roses, the Blue and Under the Lilies the Gray." Mrs. D. A. Grover accompanied them, also Mrs. Ruby Clark Briggs, who sang, "Faded Coat of Blue." Mrs. Grover also played an opening dirge like voluntary as the boys in khaki marched in. Six in khaki and two in navy blue.

The Boy Scouts also sat in a body. There were only three old veterans, Freeman Ellingwood, Freeman L. Wyman and Charles Dunham and his wife, two widows, Mrs. Columbia Dunham and Mrs. Martha Dunham.

The service was held in the Grange Hall and was very impressive and instructive.

Monday forenoon the children marched to the cemetery and decorated the graves of the past soldiers and sang two songs.
